You will be accompanied on the Challenge by a Challenge Aid Guide and agree to act in accordance with any instructions they may give you during the Challenge itself.

The Challenge takes place in a mountainous environment. Such activities carry with it an inherent risk. It is recommended that you take out your own travel insurance to cover any accident or loss occurring during the course of the Challenge.

You are responsible for wearing suitable clothing for the Challenge and providing your own equipment.

We reserve the right to alter or cancel the Challenge, or select alternative walking routes, where Challenge Aid judge the prevailing weather conditions may interfere with participants' safety. In addition, we may alter or cancel the Challenge if you or a member of your party becomes injured, unwell or is unable to complete the route due to lack of fitness. In the case of inclement weather the Challenge will be cancelled and Challenge Aid's decision on this shall be final. As this is a charitable event no monies shall be returned in the event of cancellation.
